

Description

Liriope sp - Liriope, also commonly called border grass is a member of the lily family. It has dark green ribbonlike foliage grows in length from 10 to 18 in (25-46 cm) and then recurves toward the ground to form rounded clumps. Native to the shady forest floors of Eastern Asia including regions in China, Taiwan and Japan. This plant is available in several varieties including some with white and yellow variegation. 'Monroe White' has white flowers while 'Big Blue' has intense violet-blue blossoms.

Care Tip: Divide clumps into whatever size you like from a few leaves to large chunks. Liriope transplants easily at any time of year. The blue-black berries easily germinate, but divisions are easier and quicker. This plant needs a lot of sun shine. Growing well on fertile soil.
